

CASE STUDY: Marine Energy and Wildlife

What is it?

- The State of the Science Report summarises global research on the potential effects of marine renewable energy on animals and the environment.
- It offers valuable insights for stakeholders such as researchers and developers to guide science-based decision-making and project design.
- It aims to enhance understanding and collaboration in the research community while supporting more informed and streamlined consenting processes for MRE devices.

Image from State of The Science Report 2024

Find out more: State of the Science Report